Harlem doctor first in city with Ebola

NYC. A doctor who was recently in West Africa was taken to Bellevue Hospital after becoming ill.

A doctor who recently returned from West Africa became the first New Yorker to test positive for Ebola on Thursday.

Craig Spencer, 33, who lives on 147th Street in Harlem, just got back from a Doctors Without Borders trip, according to the group.

"There is no reason for New Yorkers to be alarmed," Mayor Bill de Blasio said in a press conference Thursday evening. "New Yorkers who have not been exposed to an infected person's bodily fluids are not at risk."

The health department said shortly after 3 p.m. Thursday they were testing a patient who was experiencing a fever and gastrointestinal symptoms. They said Spencer returned to JFK Airport on Oct. 17.

Spencer went to a bowling alley in Williamsburg Wednesday night. He had no symptoms until suffering a fever Thursday morning. That's when he contacted authorities.

An emergency team wearing protective gear transported the doctor to Bellevue Hospital, which is designated for any potential Ebola patients.

He was exposed to "a very few number of people," Gov. Andrew Cuomo said. "The more facts you know, the less frightening the situation is."

Cuomo said the city had been in contact with "four or five people" who came into close contact with Spencer. Spencer's girlfriend and two friends have already been quarantined.

According to Spencer's LinkedIn page, he is a fellow of international emergency medicine at Columbia University.

Ebola facts

Council Member Mark Levine is urging New Yorkers to call 311 if they think they might have been in contact with Spencer, or for more information on the virus.

- A health department release said: "The chances of the average New Yorker contracting Ebola are extremely slim. Ebola is spread by directly touching the bodily fluids of an infected person. You cannot be infected simply by being near someone who has Ebola."

NYC. Holland Tunnel lanes to close for an emergency drill

Westbound lanes leading to New Jersey will be closed in the Holland Tunnel from midnight to 6 a.m. on Sunday morning, delaying traffic as the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey conducts an emergency response drill.

Motorists should expect to see smoke conditions and emergency vehicles as part of the exercise.

While the New York-bound lanes will remain open during the drill, those traveling to New Jersey are advised to take either the Lincoln Tunnel or George Washington Bridge. METRO

NYC. Officer injured, suspect killed after hatchet attack

A man was shot and killed by police in Jamaica on Thursday afternoon after he struck a police officer in the head with a hatchet.

The officer, 25, is in critical condition.

Police Commissioner Bill Bratton said the incident happened at 2 p.m. at 162nd Street and Jamaica Avenue. Two officers were on patrol when they were asked to take a picture.

As the officers posed, a suspect appeared and "charged" them. The suspect hit an officer in the arm with a hatchet, then hit the other officer in the back of the head. Two other officers opened fire, killing the suspect. METRO

Manhattan. NYPD officers will receive mobile devices, tablets

Over the next three years, all NYPD officers will receive a mobile device to use while on patrol.

Some 6,000 patrol cars will also be outfitted with tablet computers," according to the mayor's office.

Mayor Bill de Blasio, Police Commissioner William Bratton and Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance Jr. made the announcement Thursday.

The updated mobile technology is expected to enhance patrol by giving officers quicker access to record checks, receiving information related to emergency calls and writing reports while in the field. More 911 data will be available to responders, including GPS. Detectives will be able to access investigative data. The new tools will also help officers better receive wanted person information and send out alerts on counterterrorism.

"The timely access to critical information is key to effective policing and enhanced public safety. This initiative will clearly result in more efficient crime-fighting, counterterrorism measures," Bratton said.

The mobile devices will give law enforcement access to the Domain Awareness System, an antiterrorism measure. In the next year, devices may be able to scan fingerprints.

WENDY JOAN BIDDLECOMBE

Settlement funds

The project is expected to cost $160 million, funded by settlement money both the district attorney and city received earlier this year from French bank BNP Paribas.

- Bratton said the new technology "will significantly help to advance the NYPD's move into 21st century policing."

Medical center's polio exhibit sheds light on Ebola crisis

Manhattan. The installment honors World Polio Day.

In coordination with World Polio Day on Oct. 24, NYU Langone is hosting "Polio: Confronting an Epidemic." With an iron lung and other chilling artifacts on display, the exhibit provides a valuable historic context for how the world addresses contagions today, like Ebola. We spoke to Dr. David Oshinsky, Pulitzer-winning author of "Polio: An American Story."

What can we learn from Polio about how to handle the Ebola crisis?
The lesson is to remain calm but vigilant. In the 1950s, there were 50,000 cases of polio a year in the U.S. — meaning thousands of children in leg braces, wheelchairs and iron lungs. Because of vaccines, there hasn't been polio in the Western Hemisphere in decades. There was a sense of unity in the '50s. The public had faith in the government. That trust has dramatically eroded. Health authorities must show the public a coherent program to fight Ebola.

The exhibit looks at the history of polio. / PROVIDED

Quoted

"The problem with vaccines is people take them for granted." Dr. Oshinsky

How has the opinion of vaccination changed?
The growth of the anti-vaccine movement is troubling. Diseases that are easily handled are making a comeback. Parents don't see polio, so they wonder why their children should be vaccinated. The answer is simple: If vaccination rates fall below a certain level, polio may return. It's only a plane ride away in our increasingly interconnected world.

Six in quarantine in Connecticut as US steps up Ebola checks

Virus. Fears about the spread of Ebola have mounted in the United States.

A U.S. Coast Guard Corpsman working with the Office of Field Operations checks the temperature of a traveler at Washington Dulles International Airport. / REUTERS

Connecticut placed six West Africans who recently arrived in the United States under quarantine for possible Ebola exposure, a move that comes as the United States starts new restrictions on those coming from the countries hardest hit by the deadly virus.

The family of six West Africans, who arrived Oct. 18 and were planning to live in the United States, will be watched for 21 days, Connecticut state health authorities said Thursday. Officials have yet to say where the family came from.

Numerous local health authorities have launched similar quarantines or watches on those who have been to Ebola-hit countries, though no other infections have been found through these measures. The virus is spread through direct contact with bodily fluids from an infected person and is not airborne.

The crisis is forcing the U.S. health care system to consider withholding some medical interventions because they are too dangerous to doctors and nurses and unlikely to help a patient. REUTERS

Stup!d MONEY MYTHS Debunked!
At a FREE Workshop

The Ripple Effect

If you are living by the old money paradigm, your financial future is in serious jeopardy. Our country is still feeling the ripple effect from the 2008 financial crash. And, I believe another one is on the horizon.

You Can't Win The Game If You Don't Know The Rules

The rules have changed. Sadly, most people still operate under the old money paradigm: go to school; get a job; work hard; save; invest in a 401k, etc. How's that working out for you? For most people, it's NOT!

Investors Get Money To Work For Them

If you cling to the old money paradigm, you will have to work harder and harder. Investors get money to work for them, instead of constantly working for money. The poor and middle class buy liabilities they mistake for assets. Investors acquire assets.

Maryland man, 23, is charged after jumping White House fence

K-9. The two dogs that stopped the intruder have been cleared to return to duty after being treated for bruising.

A man arrested after jumping the White House fence on Wednesday night has been charged with three felony counts and four misdemeanors, the U.S. Secret Service said on Thursday.

Dominic Adesanya of Bel Air, Maryland, was unarmed when he was arrested on the White House grounds after facing Secret Service dogs that stopped and attacked him, the Secret Service said.

The incident came about one month after an intruder with a knife scaled the White House fence and entered the executive mansion, raising questions about security at the heavily guarded complex and spurring the resignation of Julia Pierson as Secret Service director.

Quoted

"He'd done it before. He didn't get that close."

Adesanya's father, who declined to be named, told WMAR

Officials charged Adesanya, 23, with two felony counts of assault on a K-9 police officer, one felony count of making threats and four misdemeanor counts of resisting and unlawful entry, Secret Service spokesman Brian Leary said. REUTERS

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

PRESIDENTA NON GRATA

The phone rings. I answer to a familiar voice.

"Hey, Tom! What's going on? Are you up for some fun?"

"Oh hi, Mr. President. What do you have in mind?"

"Maybe a cold beer after work. Or some hoops!"

"I'd like to, but I'm kind of busy. What about your fellow Democrats?"

"Hmm … yeah, no. They don't want to play with me anymore."

Of course, that didn't really happen, but it certainly could have. With a critical mid-term election looming, there are plenty of Dems who would rather be seen dancing a polka with John Boehner than sharing a podium with Barack Obama. The president's approval rating is not quite a hockey score, but it is around the lowest he's ever seen. And that means members of his party who are struggling to win in a few weeks, would rather not be seen in his company.

Quoted

One minute everyone wants an invitation to your state dinner, the next they won't let you grab a picnic table at their barbecue. But it is not uncommon.

This sort of thing is hard on presidents. Imagine what it feels like to go from being the most popular guy in town, to persona non grata in such short order. One minute everyone wants an invitation to your state dinner, the next they won't let you grab a picnic table at their barbecue. But it is not uncommon. Even well-liked chief executives, when they start waddling into that lame duck territory of their final term, start feeling like yesterday's news and they become unwelcome around those who want to be tomorrow's headlines.

Here is the strange part: Many of the same Dems who are fighting so hard to keep POTUS at arm's length really do like his policies. They just know that most of America does not. Which leads to ridiculous things like Democratic candidates who won't even say publicly that they voted for Mr. Obama.

Still, that is the state of play for the man who calls the White House home right now. And unless the Dems defy the polls and somehow come out big winners, you can only expect more of it on the Democratic side. "Barack? Former Senator? No, can't say I've ever heard of him."

Security. Canada's PM pledges tougher safety laws after shooting

Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper pledged to boost security forces' surveillance and detention powers on Thursday, a day after a gunman killed a soldier and raced through parliament before being shot dead.

Addressing the House of Commons just meters from the spot where the gunman, a reported convert to Islam, was shot dead on Wednesday, Harper said lawmakers would expedite new powers to counter the threat of radicals.

"The objective of these attacks was to instill fear and panic in our country," Harper said.

Harper pledged to speed up a plan already under way to bolster Canadian laws and police powers in the areas of "surveillance, detention and arrest."

Harper said the attack, which followed an incident on Monday when a convert to Islam ran over two Canadian soldiers with his car, killing one, would strengthen Canada's response to "terrorist organizations." REUTERS

GrubHub revenue jumps as more customers order food online

GrubHub Inc. reported a more than five-fold jump in quarterly profit as more consumers used the online food-order-and-delivery company to order meals.

The company's shares rose as much as 6 percent to $39.50 in early trading on Thursday.

GrubHub, which delivers everything from expensive steaks to bento boxes, receives a commission from restaurants on orders booked through its website and mobile application.

Online food delivery companies have been benefiting as more people use smartphones and other devices to order online.

GrubHub said its number of active diners grew 50 percent to 4.6 million from a year earlier.

"... Growth in active diners remained strong even as we reduced overall advertising spending sequentially in the seasonally slow third quarter," co-founder and chief executive Matt Maloney said in a statement on Thursday. REUTERS

Humanlike. Google, Oxford boost artificial intelligence efforts

Google is expanding its artificial intelligence initiative, hiring more than half a dozen leading academics and experts in the field and announcing a partnership with Oxford University to "accelerate" its efforts.

Google will make a "substantial contribution" to establish a research partnership with Oxford's computer science and engineering departments, the company said on Thursday regarding its work to develop the intelligence of machines and software, often to emulate human-like intelligence.

Google did not provide any financial details about the partnership, saying only in a post on its blog that it will include a program of student internships and a series of joint lectures and workshops "to share knowledge and expertise."

Google, which is based in Mountain View, California, is building up its artificial intelligence capabilities as it strives to maintain its dominance in the Internet search market and to develop new products such as robotics and self-driving cars. REUTERS

Eating disorders. New study finds link between stress and appetite

Eating disorders could soon join the growing number of mental illnesses that have a biological link.

New research shows that a protein produced by some intestinal bacteria could be the source of disordered eating, including anorexia and bulimia.

Eating disorders are estimated to affect about 15 percent to 20 percent of the general population, and evidence is growing that they could also be triggered by biological issues related to appetite.

The study doesn't mean a cure for anorexia is in the works. GETTY IMAGES

"Anorexia and bulimia are caused by combined effects of biological and environmental causes," says Dr. Serguei Fetissov of the University of Rouen. The social pressure surrounding weight creates enormous stress, particularly on young women, to start diets. "The restrictions involved have a direct influence on the biology of the intestine because the bacteria are put under a situation of stress, and therefore produce this protein that deregulates their appetite," he says.

"The social factors would trigger the eating disorders, but the protein would be responsible for its persistence – it's a vicious cycle," he adds.

Now that the protein has been identified, does it mean that some kind of drug to neutralize it could help treat eating disorders? "An antibiotic would kill any bacteria without being able to target one kind, so the idea would be to find a selective antibiotic, which doesn't really exist today, to reduce the production of the protein," he says.

The team's next step is to develop a blood test to detect ClpB. "If we are successful in this, we will be able to establish specific and individualized treatments for eating disorders," Fetissov says.

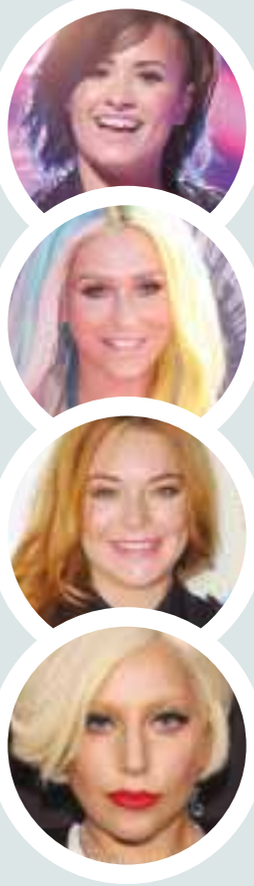
Celebrities who went public with their eating disorders

Demi Lovato

In 2012, Lovato revealed in the documentary "Stay Strong" that her struggle with bulimia and self-harm didn't end after she completed rehab in 2010. "I cannot tell you that I haven't thrown up since treatment, and I cannot tell you that I have not cut myself since treatment," said the singer. "This has been a daily battle."

Kesha

In January, Kesha entered rehab for bulimia and anorexia, which she had suffered from for several years. "She had a breakdown," her mother, Pebe Sebert, told People magazine. "She called me from the gas station and admitted how much she'd been throwing up." Doctors told her "it was a miracle she hadn't dropped dead on stage." In an open letter for Elle UK, she wrote, "I convinced myself that being sick, being skinny, was part of my job."



Lindsay Lohan

The actress was at the highest point of her career in 2006 when she confessed to struggling with anorexia – as well as drug use and emotional problems – in Vanity Fair. "I was making myself sick," Lohan said. When she was 19, "Saturday Night Live" star Tina Fey and her producer staged an intervention. "[They] sat me down, literally before I was going to do [SNL], and they said, 'You need to take care of yourself."

Lady Gaga

When she was hit by critics for her 26-pound weight gain in September 2012, Gaga opened up about her long-term eating issues. "Bulimia & Anorexia since I was 15... My weight/loss/gain since I was child has tormented me," she wrote for Body Revolution, a section of her website where fans are encouraged to embrace and share their flaws.

Play your Cars right

"Ric was a megastar in our most formative years. Before we even picked up our instruments, we saw him as this god on Earth. People that were stars when you're in your early formative years will always have a power and a charisma that later stars never can. ... Every time we make a record with him, it sounds like Weezer."

Cuomo on how if "Everything" has some sonic similarities to the band's blue debut, it might be due to the influence of Ric Ocasek of The Cars, who produced both albums.

Back to the good life

Live. With the new "Everything Will Be Alright in the End," Weezer frontman Rivers Cuomo believes that yes, it will.

For a band famous for songs about youthful alienation, with titles such as "The World Has Turned and Left Me Here," naming an album "Everything Will Be Alright in the End" represents a big shift. But Weezer frontman Rivers Cuomo says that change has been hard-won.

"We went through so many life stages, creative stages, interests, experiences, ups and downs, and we faced some deeply troubling realities," he says of the years since Weezer's previous album, 2010's "Hurley."

After all of that, Cuomo says the lesson the band learned is what led them to give such an optimistic title to the album, which came out earlier this month.

"I think really, it's just a way to put into one phrase, with words, the feeling you get from the album," he says. "Over the course of the 41 minutes, you go through quite a few different worlds and terrains and ultimately it feels triumphant by the time you get to the final chorus."

The band members are so happy about "Everything" that they're playing every song from the album at each tour stop, though Cuomo assures us that older songs will be in the mix as well. Asked if playing those older songs still feels as personal to him as more recent efforts, Cuomo replies, "I feel like Weezer at its best is writing from a very deep, timeless and ageless place that I have no problems relating to. Even with our earliest songs, they feel like us."

That's not to say the new album isn't personal: "I'm always inspired by the emotional push and pull in my relationships and my daily life," he says.

We ask him to explain the ominously titled "Eulogy for a Rock Band." The opening lines of the song are, "Goodbye, heroes, you had a good run, 15 years of ruling the planet, but now your light's fading." He promises it's not a comment about Weezer, but was inspired by seeing one of his musical heroes.

"A forefather who's perhaps the biggest rock star of all time in one of the later stages of his career," is all that he will reveal.

Though Cuomo is cagey about who the musician was, he does say the experience made him think about how "each successive generation is less familiar with his work, and ultimately that means he and his life's work are headed towards oblivion, and realizing that, 'Gosh, if that's the fate of his work, then obviously that goes for the rest of us, too.'"

But everything will be all right in the end, right? Cuomo says keeping to that credo is what gives him the confidence to keep going as an artist.

"Even if we're not 100 percent certain, that's what we have to tell ourselves," he says.

Smaller venues: Feels good inside

Weezer will mostly play smaller club shows on their current tour, which Cuomo is a big fan of. "Playing giant venues is great because it's just such a spectacle from the stage to see 80,000 people. It's awe-inspiring, but we also love playing for just a few people or a few hundred people, feeling them right next to us, right in front of us. They tend to be the most hardcore fans and will sing every word at the top of their lungs and you know how much your music means to them. That's what every artist dreams of, and it's the greatest feeling in the world."

CYMBALS rock The Delancey and Pianos this weekend. / ALL PHOTOS BY GETTY IMAGES

Running the first leg of the Music Marathon

CMJ. Tight, well-crafted songwriting, fuzzy pop and infectious soul color the first half of our CMJ Music Marathon, the 34-year-old music discovery festival that still prides itself on discovery — and rightly so.

YAWN not boring

For fans of scuzzy psych rock, Chicago's YAWN will be your new favorite band. We caught the four-piece, who have spent the previous five years building a reputation in Chicago's underground scene, in their perfect environment: the basement of Cake Shop. Swagger, fuzzy riffs and occasional synths morph in late night-friendly tracks such as "Flytrap" and "Under the She." They're still a bit under the radar, but they're well worth your time.
YAWN have no remaining shows scheduled, but keep an eye out for changes on www.cmj.com/marathon.

CYMBALS make an impact

It's always a highlight to see the international bands who come to CMJ to make their names known stateside. London-based CYMBALS — Is this caps-stylized band name thing a trend? — caught our attention with their synth-y dance rock. Vocalist and guitarist Jack Cleverly leads the charge with his brooding, emotive vocals against a totally '80s backdrop. In a year, we'll be glad we caught them on such a small stage.
Remaining shows: Friday, 6 p.m., The Delancey; Saturday, 9 p.m., Pianos

All in for Girlpool

It's hard to describe Girlpool, an LA-based guitar and bass duo without using the word "whine," but this is one of the first times we've enjoyed whining! File this group in the twee pop category next to cult groups like Beat Happening and memories of your 4-year-old sister singing lullabies.
Remaining shows: Friday, 7 p.m., Pianos; Saturday, 10 p.m., Cake Shop

MOSES SUMNEY WAS AN EARLY CMJ 2014 HIGHLIGHT.

We saw Moses

We had the good fortune of seeing LA-based rising folk mastermind Moses Sumney in the confines of a private apartment in the Lower East Side courtesy of So-far Sounds, a volunteer-run organization which hosts private pop-up shows. The 24-year-old melody maker has collaborated with indie rock superstars Karen O and Beck, but that hasn't gotten in the way of his mesmerizing solo show full of intimate lyrics, gorgeous voice exercises and electronic loops. Sadly, there are no scheduled CMJ shows remaining for Sumney, but that doesn't mean one won't pop up over the weekend. Follow us on Twitter for updates!

CATCH MICHAEL CHE ON "SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE" WITH HOST JIM CARREY ON SATURDAY AT 11:30 P.M. ON NBC.

Interview. The newest "Weekend Update" co-anchor talks about what it's like behind the desk.

It's safe to say that New York City has been good to native Michael Che. The comedian is co-anchoring "Saturday Night Live" centerpiece "Weekend Update" after time on "The Daily Show." We talked to him about the new job and changes in his hometown.

What's your approach to "Weekend Update"?
My approach is just telling jokes that I think are funny — talking about things that I would like to see talked about and telling the jokes that I think are really funny. The feedback's been great; it's still a process of learning how to do the job better. I feel like every week is a process of getting better, and we're definitely headed in the right direction. Me and [co-anchor Colin] Jost are having a lot of fun.

Were you intimidated the first time you sat there?
It's extremely intimidating because you're doing something that a lot of people care about. ... They grew up with it, [and] it's important to them. So it's very intimidating. It's like babysitting somebody's kid. You don't want it to get messed up on your shift.

Do you think it's gotten tougher to live in New York?
New York is still the toughest city, but it's different. ... Technology has made things a lot easier, and it's a lot safer than it used to be, but it's still tough. Just ask anybody on the 29th when rent is due how tough New York really is.

Is there a NYC odor that you think is the worst?
Oh, man, there are plenty of New York smells, but the empty car on a crowded subway is the worst smell in New York City. You walk in because you say, "Wow, there are seats!" Every other car is crowded. Then as soon as you get on you get why that train car is empty — because it smells to holy hell and the doors are closed and you can't get off.

Kate Wolff placed in last year's She-Devil Comedy Festival. / PROVIDED

She-Devils are funny as hell

Comedy. Women get all the laughs at annual comedienne competition.

"When you become a parent, it totally changes how you think about things," Kate Wolff tells her audience. "I can't do dangerous things the same, 'cause if I die, he doesn't have a mom. So, what I do is — I take him with me."

These lines, and the laughs that followed, helped Wolff win fourth place in last year's She-Devil Comedy Festival, established in 2012 by Steve Hofstetter and Jacob Morvay, former owners of the Laughing Devil Comedy Club in Long Island City. Inspiration came from a set of shows featuring female comedians, or "she-devils." "People loved it," Hofstetter says. "We realized that a lot of people want to see more female comedians."

With a prize of $2,000 and guaranteed work, the She-Devil Comedy Festival opens with 60 comedians performing a duo of four-minute sets. Six finalists are determined by professionalism, stage presence, originality and strength of writing. No material can be repeated between rounds.

"You're being judged on specific criteria as opposed to being just funny," explains 2013's winner, Pat Brown. "You don't have the luxury of interacting with an audience, getting a feel for them or letting them get to know you."

Hofstetter counters: "It does help us see who is great under pressure and who has a wealth of material." For all the benefits, however, Wolff points out a potential danger: "If you want to be 'better' than someone else, you end up missing the point — which is to just create good art."

But the most important part of the She-Devil Comedy Festival is the opportunity it gives women to showcase their talents in an industry dominated by men. "Society, in general, needs to become more supportive of women boldly going after their dreams," Wolff says. To that end, proceeds from the fest are donated to FORCE, the only nonprofit devoted to hereditary breast and ovarian cancer.

Real-World Love Advice

CHARLES J. ORLANDO

Charles J. Orlando is a relationship expert and author of the best-selling book series "The Problem with Women ... Is Men." Find out more about him on his website, or visit him on Facebook for real-world love advice.

What makes a man or a woman cheat

Despite recent articles and studies that suggest the existence of a cheating gene ingrained into the DNA of some people (nothing like being the victim of your own biology), there is no excuse for infidelity. There might be explanations, but there is no excuse.

Ultimately, if you are so unhappy in your relationship that you are looking externally to fulfill your emotional and/or physical needs, you need to leave! Close one chapter before starting another, allowing all involved to preserve his or her dignity and honor as things end. Unfortunately, that's not necessarily the way things go sometimes.

Flings and affairs

There are two types of extramarital relationships: flings and affairs. Flings are the most common, most often involving opportunity, lust and lack of self-control. Affairs are different, as they aren't fast hit-it-and-quit-it acts of misguided lust and sexual wanting. These are long-term relationships — sometimes involving sex, sometimes not — and they are trickier for someone to get over because there has been investment over time, including an emotional investment.

Which brings us to a different kind of cheating for the Web-based era:

If you were saddened by the loss of Robin Williams but are laughing at what's happening to Amanda Bynes, you need to check yourself. Mental illness isn't funny.

online affairs. There are an endless number of Websites that enable affairs (whose highest-spending advertisers are divorce attorneys). But meeting someone online and then quickly transferring the relationship to the real world is really just a fling. Online affairs are different. With social media and community-centric Websites now ingrained into our everyday lives, connecting with others in remote locations isn't just the activity of a small subculture. Bottom line: Online cheating — without any physical contact — is the most damaging type of infidelity because the entire "connection" is emotional.

For exclusive commentary, visit Metro.us/blogs.

Why we cheat

In surveying 1,000 men and women (483 men, 543 women), two things are clear: 1) Women cheat just as much as men, and 2) The reasons the genders cheat are very different: Eighty-six percent of the women reported cheating mostly for emotional reasons. Their top three:

- Lack of emotional intimacy
- Relationship unhappiness
- To reaffirm her desirability

Of the men polled, 82 percent openly admitted to cheating largely for physical or sexual gratification with no emotional tie. Rounding out the top reasons men cheat:

- Just want to have sex or sexual variety
- Presented with an opportunity to have sex without getting immediately caught
- Satisfy sexual curiosity about having sex with a particular person

She knows the real Snowden

LAURA POITRAS / FILMMAGIC

Visit Metro.us to read about how Poitras hid her Snowden footage from authorities.

Interview. Filmmaker Laura Poitras talks about filming the NSA leaks as they happened for the doc "Citizenfour."

When Edward Snowden was sitting in a Hong Kong hotel room first leaking his explosive intel, documentarian Laura Poitras was there, filming him. This nail-biting week takes up half of her resulting film, "Citizenfour," which finally puts a human face on Snowden. And incredibly, Poitras, who now resides in Berlin, was not stopped when she returned to U.S. soil.

How did Snowden convince you that he wasn't a crazy person?
He gave a me a lot of top-secret documents. [Laughs] That'll do it. It was one of my early questions: "How do I know you're not trying to entrap me? How do I know you're legitimate?" He wrote back and said, "You'll know it's legitimate once you get the documents and start to ask for comment from officials."

Edward Snowden confers with journalist Glenn Greenwald in Laura Poitras' "Citizenfour," now in theaters. / RADIUS-TWC

How was Snowden when you last saw him?
He looked a lot healthier and a lot happier. His diet has not been particularly great. He seemed in much better spirits, with a little less of the weight of the world on him. The person I met in Hong Kong grew up a lot in a short amount of time. There was a naivete I think is gone now. I don't think he expected to still be able to engage in these kinds of debates. I think he was prepared for much worse consequences.

Are you now off the grid?
I still have a Gmail account. But I've pretty much migrated everything that I want to keep private off of it. I haven't been using a cellphone for the last year, because I've been going to the editing room and I know that could be used as a tracking device. But now that the film is out in the world, I need to start carrying a cellphone.

The real Snowden

Getting to know him

The film spends a lot of time just hanging with Snowden. Even just doing that helps fill in gaps in his story.
It certainly debunks certain narratives. If you think he's an agent for a foreign power, you just throw that one away — burn it and flush it down the toilet. Then you're presented with a person who makes a decision, and you get to decide what to make of him. He put his life on the line for things he felt the public had an absolute right to know. I agree with him that the public has the right to know. But I also think there's enough information in the film that you could reach a different conclusion.

Review

Can you believe Keanu Reeves is 50 years old? / DAVID LEE

Keanu Reeves returns to gunplay with this action-revenge saga, playing a former mega-assassin who comes out of retirement to kill a mobster (Michael Nyqvist) and his evidently hundreds of minions after the guy's son kills his beagle.

The lowdown: If "John Wick" took itself seriously, it would be bad; if it were a broad lampoon of an action movie, it would be bad. Luckily, it finds a comfortable middle ground: It's both a stripped-down, reductio ad absurdum of the vengeance action picture and a giddy send-up of same. The violence is cranked up to 11, but even with Sad Keanu becoming Anguished Keanu, it's all a cartoon. (There's no way of counting how many people get shot point blank in the face, but all they suffer is a small spurt of blood. Any more realistic and it wouldn't be fun.)

But it's not just cheerfully over-the-top gunplay. It also has its own goofy alternate world. There isn't simply an underworld of assassins; there's an actual club, with a membership and its own wry, martini-swilling president (Ian McShane). It's knowingly ridiculous but also actually witty; at one point, Nyqvist stakes claim to uttering the greatest and most loaded exclamation of the word "Oh" in acting history. Its tongue is in a very specific place in its cheek. It's smart, but it's not so smart that it doesn't deliver good, dumb thrills. MATT PRIGGE

Not everyone is jealous of Sykes

Re: 'Those who oppose Sykes are just envious' (Metro, Oct. 23)
How does Ron Falcon conclude that people who criticize Timothy Sykes must do so because they are poor and jealous? On the contrary — I have a solid career, am debt-free and have been investing from a young age. I am well versed in the world of finance. My problem with Mr. Sykes is not simply that he is a millionaire and I am not. My problem is that his success comes with endless self-promotion, arrogance and a complete lack of any actually useful advice.

Terrorism is a deadly disease

Another terrorist attack and this time in Ottawa, Canada. These homegrown terrorists are being recruited to commit acts of hate. These egregious and nefarious acts perpetrated in Ottawa can occur here again if we don't report what we see that doesn't seem right. I'm appalled and concerned that these people are being indoctrinated in a philosophy of hate that is a deadly disease worse than Ebola.

3 Stories to watch as Jets tangle with Bills

NFL. The Jets are finally entering a weaker part of their schedule as they look for a win.

The first game of the Percy Harvin era has arrived and ridiculous levels of hype have followed.

Harvin is expected to transform this Jets offense, which is the second-worst passing unit in the league. While he can do a lot of good things for this offense due to the fact that in open space, he can be lethal, the Jets still actually have to get him the ball.

The Bills have won two of their last three, but also turned in a dud at the lowly Texans Week 4.

Metro takes a look at three storylines to watch as the Jets host the Bills on Sunday (1 p.m., CBS).

HARVIN COMPLAINED ABOUT HOW HE WAS USED IN SEATTLE.

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

1 Ready for Harvin

Harvin can do a little bit of everything, ranging from being a deep threat as a wide receiver to someone who can at times run the ball out of the backfield and contribute on special teams.

Harvin can stretch the field, but more than anything he will balance the offense. In all likelihood, it will be fellow wide receivers Eric Decker and Jeremy Kerley who will most benefit from the attention Harvin will bring.

"I think having Percy is going to help this team in a lot of different ways," head coach Rex Ryan said. "It's hard to put everybody down there if you're one-on-one on the outside and that includes with Decker over there as well."

2 Orton ups Bills' game

The Bills are 2-1 and the offense has been a tad bit more efficient since the team switched from E.J. Manuel to veteran Kyle Orton at quarterback.

Orton completed 72 percent of his passes for 283 yards with two touchdowns and an interception in last week's last-second win over the Vikings.

"Well I think it's always a tough decision when you have to make any type of move — whether it be the quarterback or anyone else," said Bills head coach Doug Marrone, a native of New York City. "But it goes by performance and we were looking for more production and E.J. has taken a step back."

ORTON HAS THROWN FIVE TOUCHDOWNS AND HAS A 92.5 QB RATING.

3 Run stuffers

The Bills defensive line has done a tremendous job this year in maintaining their gap assignments, which is a major reason why they're fourth in the league against the run.

Ryan praised his opponent's defensive front and their ability to penetrate and limit the ground game, saying it is a major reason for the Bills' strong start to this season. That's bad news for a Jets team that has been overly reliant on the run game to spur the offense so far this season.

If the Jets can efficiently hammer at that line through the opening three quarters with running back Chris Ivory, then they can use heavy doses of Chris Johnson's speed late in the game to open things up.

3 SPORTS

Sidelined

Nash to sit out season

It appears as though the end of the line is approaching for two-time NBA MVP Steve Nash. The 40-year-old point guard said Thursday he will not play in 2014-15 due to back injuries. Nash, the league's oldest player, has not practiced since tweaking his back on Oct. 12. The Lakers guard has a history of back problems. He played in just 15 games last season and is in the final year of his contract.
